Dear Sir/Madam,

I am excited to apply for Gaming Designer. I find myself very suitable for this position due to my academic background and skillsets.
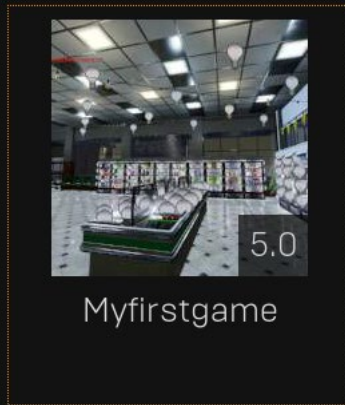

First of all, I have obtained an Undergraduate degree of Mechanical Engineering and will obtain a Master degree of English in the coming future, which means I have interdisciplinary expertise, skills and research experience in both fields; thus, I believe such capacity could make significant contribution to your organization. I am familiar with not only general IT such as MS office, but also advanced IT like Python and HTML.

During my time in MA, I have some practical experience in game development for educational purpose, which is known as gamification. For my course project this year, I developed a demo call Supermarket simulator to illustrate my ideas about how simulator-like games benefit youngsters' learning from interaction and tried to explore the educational functions of games by keeping entertaining factors as the greatest feature of games. I used Unreal Engine 4 to develop my demo and borrowed a scene of a supermarket from my storage in April, right before the release of UE 5. What's interesting is that the same scene also appeared later in the same kind of game, Police Simulator: Patrol Officers, which was released in June. In addition, with my expertise in linguistic fields plus related certificate in translation, I believe that I am a perfect match for this job.

Secondly, since my first day in Ireland, I have learnt how to communicate with people from different cultural background. I have made so many great friends and shown great adaptability in an exotic culture so different from my original one. I am an easy-going and open-minded person. There is no problem for me communicating with people in English at all. I enjoy talking to different people and working on the same cause. In working circumstance, I am capable of communicating with colleagues effectively, working independently or collaboratively under pressure.

Last but not least, according to the program description, I am a great candidate for this position. I will prove myself as a self-motivated and pragmatic person with potential of progressing to full chartered status if I am privileged to join your organization. I will try my best to meet the job requirements. I would love to bring my practical skills and open mindset to this position. I am eager to learn from a real-life environment and I am ready to start immediately. I really hope that you can put me on your list of candidates.

Kind regards,

Ziqi
